Maoyi Cai, M.D., M.S., Dipl.O.M. (NCCAOM)

Maoyi Cai served as a board member of the Acupuncture Committee of Alberta, Canada, from 2003 to 2005. He was also the Dean of Academic Affairs at Alberta College of Acupuncture and Traditional Chinese Medicine, between 1997 and 2005. Cai passed the American and Canadian medical licensing examinations, and was certified as an M.D. in 1997 and 1999, respectively. Cai joined the faculty of the Texas Health and Science University in January, 2006. Cai has been the Academic Dean since 2008. Cai was also certified as a Diplomate of Oriental Medicine by NCCAOM in 2009.

Lin-ying Tan, Lic.Ac. Ph.D.

Linying Tan has been a student of Traditional Chinese Medicine for more than seventeen (17) years; she has taught professionally for more than eleven (11) years, and has been a practitioner of acupuncture for more than six (6) years. She is the author, principal and/or co-researcher of more than sixteen (16) published research articles and studies.

Haitao Cao, Lic. Ac., Ph.D.

Haitao Cao earned her Master's degree in 2003 and her Doctorate in 2006. She came to the University in January of 2007 with over ten years of experience as a clinician, instructor, and researcher in Traditional Chinese Medicine, specializing in Internal Medicine. She has published original research in journals such as Traditional Chinese Medicine Research and Chinese Journal of Integrated Traditional and Western Medicine on Digestion, and has edited volumes such as Methodology of Traditional Chinese Medicine and Introduction to Traditional Chinese Medicine.

Kai-Chang Chan, , Lic.Ac., D.A.O.M., M.S.A.O.M.

Kai-Chang Chan comes to the faculty of Texas Health and Science University with a rich heritage in Traditional Chinese Medicine. Born in Taiwan and raised in a family culture committed to the business of Chinese herbs, Kai developed an early interest in the profession of Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine. He earned his bachelor's degree with a major in Physical Therapy with a specialty in sport medicine and pain management. After receiving his Physical Therapy License, he has complemented these skills with his interest in the special techniques of cupping and Asian Body Work. He teaches in the San Antonio classrooms and works as a Licensed Acupuncturist practitioner in the Clinic.

William Hong

Dr. Hong has instructed many students of Traditional Chinese Medicine since 2008. In addition to his teaching, Dr. Hong has served as academic dean in Korean and English language MSTCM programs, participated in program evaluation, served as campus security officer, and assisted in adoption of several online program management systems. Dr. Hong's broad experience as a licensed acupuncturist and earned doctorate make him a welcome addition to our core faculty at Texas Health and Science University.
